He then turned his attention to the Republican platform, PARKER GETS VOTE weakness, and arraigned the party for its attitude on the trusts. He denounced in the severest terms the "elective franchise" plank of the Republican paltform, and threats to reduce the southern representation in Delegation for Parker and J the house of Representatives, and the electoral college. Referring to the Democratic party he said: "Democracy will nominate for president a man trained in the ways of the con. National Committeeman Urey Wood stitution, who will not usurp legislative or indicial functions, who will not keep the people guessing what he's going to do or say next. Order Received to Dispose o Second Presbyterian.

Dr. S. B. Caldwell Is Named A Special Commissioner to Make the Sale.

CLOSED FOR SEVERAL YEARS

Dr. S. B. -Caldwell was this morn ing authorized to act as special commissioner to sell the Second Presby terian church property on South Fifth street, near Jackson, and will sell the property as soon as a purchaser can be found.

The sale was forced by a mortgage held by the Louisville Trust company as executor of the estate of Mrs. Fry. Mrs. Fry held mortgage on the property which is owned by the Kentucky Synod and the latter last night telegraphed authority to sell without litigation in order to enable the exeoutor to settle the estate as easily as

Dr. Caldwell will try to sell the property to some religious body to Guerdon, of the British force, was ase as a mission church, or for some religious purpose. The property is not in good repair but could be fixed up with little expense if to be used for s church and is worth about $3,000.

This church has been closed for several years, its last minister being Rev. William R. Taylor, who left here about five years ago for Missouri, where he died several months later.

Brought Up.
Everybody who remembers the king of Italy as a lad should remember the name of Col. Osio, for many years his "governor." The prince of Naples, as the king was then called, was a very delicate boy and he was treated by Col. Osio with almost Spartan sever ity, which was much criticised at the time. Nevertheless, the king cher-ished a kindly feeling for him, as was proved on the occasion of the birth of little Princess Yolande, by his con-ferring on his ex-governor the hereditary title of count, with the privilege of adding the pale blue of the house of Savoy to his coat of arms. The following anecdote illustrates Col Osio's methods with his royal pupil: One day he received a request from a well-known personage for the auto-graph of the young prince, to be added to a collection containing that of his father and grandfather. The prince was about to comply when the colonel sharply farbade him, adding; "What value has the signature of an insignificant boy, who does not even know how to write properly?"

They began tossing $5 bills into the tambourine in turn, then wrote checks for the same amount until the tam-bourine held $500. "Guess that's enough, Jack; let's stop," said James.

tions for July as figured out by Rev. Irl R. Hicks, follows:

This month begins in the last stage of a storm period central on June the 29. Storm and perturbations of Farm Work Well Up-Harvesting of this period will be well on their way toward the Atlantic by the 1st and 2d, with fair and cooler weather following from the west.

A reactionary storm period is central from the 4th to the 6th. As the moon is on the celestial equator on the 4th, we may reasonably calculate on a decided rise in temperature, ending in thunder and rainstorms during these reactionary days.

If the general tendency is to excessive heat and light rains from the 4th to 6th, and from the 9th to 14th, it up to September.

Upon the other hand, should cooler weather and general rains and storms be the rule at these periods, much of the same kind of weather will characterize all the storm periods for the following six or eight weeks.

About the 11h to 14th, the central dates of the second July storm period. no one should be surprised by a wave of excessive warm weather, culminating in many threatening storms and violent dangerous blustering.

Heavy hail Storms, especially to the west and north, will most likely atevent temporary change to much cooler may naturally be expected.

On and touching the 17t, h 18th and 19th warm wave with threatening storm clouds and some ran and hail.

A regular Vulcan storm period covers the 21st to the 24th. Another very warm wave, attended by storm conditions, with some rain and severe bluster, may be expected. A brief partial respite from great warmth will probably succeed the disturbances of this period.

On and touching the 27th and 28th reactionary storm conditions will return with more than ordinary inten-

Great warmth will, in every probability, reach a climax on and next to these dates. This is also a time when many seismic disturbances may naturally be expected-probably not dangerous or destructive in any place, but quite general along the sensitive earthquake zones of the globe.

"The harvesting of wheat is nearly completed; the yield promises to be much better than was expected, and the quality excellent. In some localities the continued wet weather has caused sprouting in the shock, but the extent of this damage is not great.

"Tobacco is all set and is generally growing well. The acreage is less than usual on account of a scarcity of plants in some sections.

"Corn is good color and looks vigorous, but the nights have been too cool for rapid growth.

"Oats have improved, and, though headed low, look quite promising Cutting will begin this week.

"Garden truck and Irish potatoe are in first class condition.

"Fruit does not promise well. Apples are dropping badly in many places and are knotty and irregular. In some localities peaches are rotting on the trees. Blackberries are very promising.

"Pastures and meadows have improved quite decidealy. The meadows are rather weedy, but the yield will be better than expected. "Hemp looks well and is making a good growth.

"Considerable millet has been sown and is coming up well.

"In a few localities farm work has been delayed to some extent by frequent rains but is generally well up."

"We intend to manufacture it." Mr. Morrison's fishy eyes nearly pop-ped out of his head. He controlled imself with an effort. "Mr. Thorpe," said he, "let us try to be reasonable. Our case stands this way: We have gone to a great deal of expense on the Ossawinamakee in expectation of undertaking very extensive operations there. To that end we have cleared the stream, built three dams and have laid the foundations of a harbor and boom. This has been very expensive. Now, your purchase includes most of what we had meant to log. You have, roughly speaking, about 300,000,000 in your holding, in addition to which there are several millions scattered near it which would pay nobody but yourself to get in. Our hold-

"Very well," cried Morrison, so suddenly in a passion that Wallace started back. "It's war! And let me tell you this, young man-you're a new concern, and we're an old one. We'll crush you like that!" He crisped an envelope vindictively and threw it in the waste-

"And you can leave that to me," echood Wallace. "I know a little of "I know a little of such things, and I have business conget the camp running."

"I'll start for Bay City tonight," submitted Thorpe. "There ought to be a good lot of lumber jacks lying around idle at this time of year, and it's a good place to outfit from, because we can probably get freight rates direct by boat. We'll be a little late in starting, but we'll get in some logs this winter

CHAPTER XV.

OW, in August, however, the first turmoil had died. The "jam" had boiled into town, "taken it apart" and left the inhabitants to piece it together again as they could. The "rear" had not yet arrived. As a consequence Thorpe found the city comparatively quiet.

Although his ideas were not as yet formulated, he hoped to be able to pick up a crew of first class men from those who had come down with the advance. or "jam," of the spring's drive. They should have finished their orgies by now and, empty of pocket, should be found hanging about the boarding houses and the quieter saloons. Thorpe intended to offer good wages for good twenty at first, for during the approaching winter he intended to log on a very small scale indeed. The time

With this object in view he set out from his hotel about half past 7 on the day of his arrival to cruise about in the lumber lack district. The hotel clerk had obligingly given him the names of a number of the quieter saloons where the boys "hung out" between bursts of prosperity. In the first of these Thorpe was helped materially in his vague and uncertain quest by encountering an old acquaintnnce, Jackson Hines.

The old man peered at Thorpe.
"Don't you know me?" inquired riage and widowhood as follows:

Jackson listened attentively to the other's brief recital. "Why don't you see 'Tim Shearer'

He min't doin' nothin' since the jam came down," was his comment.

'Isn't he with the M. & D. people?" sked Thorpe.

"How's that?"

'Count of Morrison. He's been filin' his teeth for M. & D. right along. Somethin' behind it all, I reckon."

"Where'll I find him?" asked Thorpe Jackson gave the name of a small boarding house. Shortly after Thorpe left him to amuse the others with his unique conversation and hunted up Shearer's stopping place.

The boarding house proved to be of the typical lumber jack class-a narrow stoop, a hallway and stair in the center and an office and bar on either side. Shearer and a half dozen other men about his own age sat, their chairs on two legs and their "cork" boots on the rounds of the chairs, smoking placidly in the tepid evening air. He approached and attempted an identifying scrutiny. The men, with the taciturnity of their class in the presence of a stranger, said nothing.

"Well, bub," finally drawled a voice from the corner, "blowed that stake you made out of Radway yet?" "That you, Shearer?" inquired

Thorpe, advancing. "You're the man

I'm looking for." "You've found me," replied the old man dryly.

Thorpe was requested elaborately to 'shake hands" with the owners of six names. Then be had a chance to intimate quietly to Shearer that he wanted a word with him alone. The river man rose silently and ied the way up the stormy interview. He wanted to do straight, uncarpeted stairs, along a nar-something at once. "Hadn't we better row, uncarpeted hall, to a square, uncarpeted bedroom. The walls and ceilings of this apartment were of unpainted planed pine. It contained a cheap bureau, one chair and a bed and washstand to match the bureau. Shearer lit the lamp and sat on the bed.
"What is it?" he asked.

"I have a little pine up in the northern peninsula within walking distance nections who know more. You just of Marquette," said Thorpe, "and I want to get a crew of about twenty men. It occurred to me that you might be willing to help me."

The river man frowned steadily at his interlocutor from under his bushy

"It belongs to a man named Carpenter and myself."

The river man pondered this slowly for an appreciable interval, and then shot out another question:

The reading of a long appropriation bill in either house of congress is invariably a most tedious proceeding for members, and equally tiresome for the clerks. Consequently when there is a slim senate or house and a large section of the bill without any committee amendments it is customary for ex-perienced clerks to skip a few words or paragraphs or even pages here and there to facilitate consideration. Rarely is there any objection to this prac tice, but one of the appropriation bills in the senate this week proved an exception to the rule.

"Mr. President," exclaimed Mr. Bacon of Georgia suddenly, "I would like to ask where the clerk is reading. I have been unable to follow the reading of the bill!"

The clerk announced the exact page and line and continued reading. Hardly three minutes later a similar inquiry luxury and extravagant perhaps more came from Mr. Culberson of Texas. directly next to Mr. Bacon.

"Mr. President," be exclaimed in a shrill voice, "I am unable to find the place where the clerk is now reading, and would like to be informed!"

The clerk proceeded in his clear, resounding voice, and because of the in-terest of so many senators in the text either order or etiquette in her private of the bill had to break senate prece dent and read every word of the bill from that time on.—Washington Times.
